GROUP HOME VULNERABLE VOTERS INTERVIEWS
A SMALL ILLINOIS CITY | NOVEMBER, 2022

With over eight million Americans living in care, assisted living, and other types of group homes, it is imperative that we make every effort to ensure the ballots of our most vulnerable voters are handled properly according to national and state election laws.

Citizens living in nursing, assisted living, and group home environments often rely on assistance from staff members and caregivers to cast their votes. While many adhere to the letter of the law and follow well-documented procedures, others may not be familiar with proper procedures related to absentee ballot requests, ballot completion, and ballot collection and delivery.

Linda is an Occupational Therapist by trade. In her profession, she frequently provides care services to residents of assisted living and group homes. As a result of working in group and assisted living homes as part of her profession, she sees first hand the reality of complex issues home administrators face like understanding and communicating proper election procedures to staff members and caregivers.

In November of 2022, Linda visited two different group homes in a small Illinois City along the Mississippi. Her objective was to learn more about actual election practices in group homes and later to assist facilities with knowledge and processes to properly adhere to state laws. These group homes are free-standing adult Developmentally Delayed group homes both licensed and certified with the State of Illinois and subject to 10 ILCS 5/19 — 12/2, defining procedures for those residing in certified facilities.

The following report offers a summary of her in-person interviews.

The Process

After obtaining explicit permission from administrators to visit both homes and interview residents who voted in 2022, Linda developed a basic questionnaire to serve as a guideline for each resident interview. Almost immediately, Linda and her team had to make adjustments in the questionnaire process as the questions were too difficult for almost all residents. An additional challenge was most resident’s short attention span, and in some cases, inability to indicate their own name. The residents’ names have been changed to protect privacy.

GROUP HOME NUMBER 1

After obtaining permission to perform the interviews, Linda and an associate visited the first home. A staff member followed the team and observed the interviews with most residents. In some cases, the staff member had to identify interviewees as were not able to identify with their own names. It is important to note that interviews were only completed for residents who voted in the then-recent 2022 election.

The staff member, indicated in a discussion with the team that she helped each resident vote by doing “extensive research” on the candidates and then explaining each candidate’s positions to each resident. The staff member also stated she showed the residents pictures of each candidate, and the residents recognize the candidates from television.

Group Home Number 1 is licensed for 16 beds. There are 15 registered voters per the voter database.

THE CENTER FOR VULNERABLE VOTERS IS HERE TO HELP

The Center for Vulnerable Voters backed this research project for one simple reason: to better understand the challenges faced by vulnerable voters and the caregivers assisting them. With that knowledge, we can better complete our mission of education, helping administrators, staff and caregivers better assist group home residents.

Unless proper procedures are followed, our most vulnerable voters face the risk of their votes not being counted, or in the worst case, thrown out due to procedural irregularities.
